Featured Article Guess Who

I was born in Ireland in 1847 and named Abraham. After I married, I moved to London where I worked with Henry Irving for 27 years. I travelled all over the world, except for Eastern Europe which seems odd considering. I began writing novels and short stories. My most famous novel was published in 1897. I spent several years researching European folklore and mythological stories before writing it. It is written as a collection of diary entries, telegrams, letters, ship logs and newspaper clippings. This story has been categorized as horror fiction, romanticized gothic, and melodrama. Mary Shelley's famous novel also fits into these categories. The original manuscript shows the title "The Un-Dead" but I changed it at the last minute to the name of my character. I died in 1912 from a series of strokes. Since my death, my character has appeared in many films, the first which included Bela Legosi. The character's name comes from a Romanian word for "Dragon" or "Devil".
